FUTURE OF THE ERIE

MUCH BRIGHTER OUTLOOK FOR THIS EASTERN TRUNK LINE.

The Wabash May Be Extended to Terre Haute-Pennsylvania Officials in Their New Fields of Labor.

A veteran in the railroad service, in conversation with a Journal reporter, said that, in his opinion, the outlook for the Erie was now much the most promising in its history. With the foreolosure sale of the N. Y., P. & O. division the lines from New York to Chicago and to Cleveland come under the absolute control of one management. He considered Mr. E. B. Thomas, its president, and his vice presidents honorable business men, and men whose word could be depended on in all that pertains to ability in operating railroads. The reorganized company begins with a light bonded debt, in comparison with that which has hung over the three roads which made up the Erie system as operated. A full ownership and light debt are among the most favorable features of the outlook for the Erie. The road is a good money earner, but for forty years has been subjected to extravagant management, and until the last two years was top-heavy with officers. Now it begins a new career. The present management has $20,000,000 to expend in betterments to the property and properly equipping the road, if it requires that sum, and that under the direction of Mr. Thomas the money will be expended judiciously no one who is acquainted with his methods of doing business will question. "The friends of the Erie," said the speaker, "expect to see it in the front as a trunk line before Jan. 1

Russell Sage's Railroad.

New York Letter in Pittsburg Dispatch. Russell Sage is the proprietor of a railroad forty miles long that gives him more thouble than all his other mileage and his millions put together. One end of it is anchored in what people who live here call the Queen City of the Hudson. The other end is at present located in a cornfield in the direction of Boston. Every time Mr. Sage gets out of sorts with the Vanderbilts or annoyed at the New York & New Haven people he stretches out his Poughkeepsie & Eastern a little and employs several men with pickaxes. Then his surveyors squint due east, and there is a big talk about the Poughkeepsie & Eastern paralleling the Boston & Albany. Threats are also made of an extension west to Chicago. Recently Uncle Russell concluded that the employes were wrecking his property. The locomotive engineers were exceeding their allowance of hree-quarters of a pound of coal per train mile and were running freights over the whole length of the road in less than two days, the schedule time taking a week, just as caprice dictated. Then other irregularities were discovered. Coupling pins and washrags and other railroad necessities were missing, and unless the leaks were stopped the line would never earn a dividend. Uncle Russell rubbed his think box and at last hit on a plan to trap lazy employes and find out the exact condition of his property. He hired a detective who could work a camera. The result of the detective's labors is now in the possession of Mr. Sage. The photos taken on the spot show the employes at play, expose deadheads, and one snap shot discloses cobwebs on a driving wheel of one of the engines. New crews are being engaged, and meanwhile it would not be safe for a camera fiend to take a trip on the Poughkeepsie & Eastern. May Abandon One of Its Lake Ports.

In railway circles there is some speculait has obtained full control of the Van- next Tuesday. dalia, will do with its St. Joseph division. Certainly it means a change in handling the business of the Pennsylvania lines. The Logansport Pharos says: "The Vandalia has a rail connection with St. Joseph, Mich., while the Pennsylvania Company has a lake connection with Milwaukee and other ports from Muskegon. It is more than probable, therefore, that in absorb-ing the Vandalia the Pennsylvania lines will abandon one or the other of the lake ports, as the new owners will not care to maintain two so close together. In this event, it is said, the St. Joe connection will be the one to go. It is also stated that the Pennsylvania Company will at an early date adopt the now popular ferry system from Milwaukee, in which event the advantage of the Muskegon harbor would be thoroughly appreciated and the ferry be es-

Extension of the Wabash. It is stated that the owners of the Wabash are seriously considering the extending of the Covington branch to Terre Haute. Orders have been given to put the Covington branch in the best physical condition. This may be the basis for the rumor. It is by no means a new scheme. Twice before has the management of the Wabash strongy favored such a move and taken steps to bring it out, but financial crises came just at the time and blighted the proposition. To build such a branch would not be expensive, either as to right of way or in its construction. There would not be many cuts or fills to make, and few bridges to build. Terre Haute is fast becoming a large feeder to the roads doing east and westbound business from that city, and the Wabash, with its aggressive methods, would secure its share of traffic from and to that Must Redeem Its Own Tickets. The fight between the Union Pacific, Denver & Gulf and the Atchison roads is not settled as much as it was. Complications have arisen which may prevent the immediate restoration of passenger rates in Colorado. The Union Pacific, Denver & Gulf has now placed a large number of cut-rate tickets with the brokers, and now that it is called on to redeem them, it asks that the other roads help it in so doing. This all the other lines flatly refused to do, and they will insist on the re-demption by the Union Pacific, Denver & Gulf of all tickets which it has placed on the market. The latter road does not like the prospect, and there are good chances of trouble before the matter is settled. It will probably end in the redemption of tickets by the road that issued them.

The Alton Asked to Explain.

Notice was given by the Alton road yesterday that it would meet the action of the Illinois Central in running homeseekers' excursions to points in the South. There appears to be much uncertainty as to what the Illinois Central will do in this particular and Chairman Caidwell called on it for a statement of what is ntended. The roads of the Central Traffic Association are running the excursions and there is little doubt that all of the Western lines will be comrelled to join in them, uiding themselves by such action as the

The receipts of the Big Four at Lafayette for 1895 were $16,240 in excess of those of 1894, an increase of 10 per cent. The Big Four's business at Lafayette now reaches $39,000 per month. C. O. The citizens of Terre Haute have been needlessly alarmed regarding the future of the Vandalia shops. There is no better place for the company's shops as to loca-tion, and it is probable, from a remark iropped to a representative of the Journal, that these shops will be made more important by enlarging or building additional rooms when the Pennsylvania perfects its plans regarding the Vandalia. The company has thirty acres of ground not oc-cupled, which would furnish an excellent location for new shops.

Judge R. R. Nelson, of St. Paul, has nade the final decree for the sale of the Duluth & Winnepeg railroad property, now in the hands of a receiver. He finds that the bonds and mortgage for $2,000,000, held by the Guaranty Trust and Safe Deposit Company, are a first lien on all the road's property and land grant, and that they are due. Unless paid by Jan. 21 the property is to be sold as an entirety by Edward Simenton, of St. Paul, who is named as master commissioner to make the sale. He is to fix the date of sale. All bidders must deposit $100,000 as a guarantee of good faith.

The large gain that St. Louis has made as a passenger center the last three years for through business, in both directions, through connections with the Wabash, the Pennsylvania lines, the Big Four and the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern, is eating into the business via Chicago to such an extent as to cause some uneasiness on the part of the Chicago east and west lines. hrough trains, both east and west from St. Louis, are as finely equipped as are the Chicago roads and the better time made via St. Louis from the West and South-west makes the St. Louis and Indianapolis lines the most desirable.

F. L. Loree on Thursday assumed the duties of general manager of the Pennsylvania lines west. Mr. Scriven, who succeeds him as superintendent of the Cleveland & Pittsburg, takes charge to-day. G. L. Peck, who succeeds Mr. Turner on the Pittsburg division, is already at his post. A Pittsburg paper, in commenting on his arrival, says: "Superintendent Peck, who is to have charge of the Pittsburg division of the Panhandle in the future, has arrived of the Panhandle in the future, has arrived in the city and is being shown around by other officials. He is a good-looking gentleman, and comes to Pittsburg with a reputation founded on real worth, which is a sufficient guarantee of his ability to manage one of the most difficult divisions on the entire system. The most surprising promotion was that of Mr. Peck, but in this respect it was equaled by that of Mr. L. F. Loree. There were other men who were more entitled to advancement than the last-named officials, but it is understood that they were so peculiarly fitted stood that they were so peculiarly fitted for the places they now occupy that it was not deemed good policy to send them else-where, and, having that understanding, they do not feel the least bit disappointed. This is not, however, intended as a di paragement to the gentlemen who are advanced, as they are in every manner fit ted for the important positions that they have been called to fill."

ELUCIDATION AND REVIEW OF IN-TERNATIONAL LESSON, JAN. 19.

Ministry of John the Baptist, as Related in Luke iii, 15-22-A Great Duty Faithfully Performed.

By REV. JAMES E. GILBERT, D. D., Secretary of the American Society of Religious Education.

(These lessons constitute the Sundayschool extension department of the above named society. All who study them are requested to send their names, postoffice address and denomination, mentioning this paper, to the author at Washington, D. C., for enrollment.)

INTRODUCTION.-The evangelical history relates the annunciation of the angel to Zacharias, and then records the birth of John, the forerunner of Jesus, but passes over in silence the remainder of the first thirty years of his life. During that time he was in preparation, possibly at Hebron, although some think he went to Jerusalem for instruction, according to the custom of the time. (Acts xxii, 3.) At last he began his wonderful ministry in the region of the Jordan, where multitudes gathered from the neighboring country. It was a motley crowd the Roman government, proud Pharisees (Matt. ili, 7), who esteemed themselves righteous above other men. (Luke xviii, 9.) These for the time laid aside the distinctions of their classes and mingled in one vast audience. Such a spectacle had not been witnessed for many centuries-a great popular awakening on the subject of reli-

ANALYSIS .- Our lesson presents in very brief form the three great features of John's ministry. He proclaimed the Christ, (Verses 15-17.) He exposed and condemned sin and sought to win sinners to a better life. (Verses 18-20.) He publicly introduced Jesus as the Christ. (Verses 21-22.) This is, The first topic shows the occasion and the manner of proclaiming the Christ. The second topic exhibits in part the substance and at least one of the results of his preaching. The third topic shows how he introduced Jesus by baptism, following the baptism of the people, receiving testimony from heaven. We shall arrange the comments on the passage under these words: Occasion, Manner, Proof, Result, Baptism, OCCASION.—The phenomenal success of John awakened discussion concerning its se-cret and import. He was a mystery. His clothing (Matt. iii, 4), his spirit and speech set him apart from other men. What was such brief time gained such mighty influence? They who were given to spe were particularly anxious to understand this unique personality, which had suddenly come into poupular favor. And, then, what would result from this great awakening? Was it only a short-lived excitement? Or would it bring permanent good to society In considering these questions the peop turned their minds toward the long-promised reign of the Messiah. They rightly judged that it was near at hand, for John had proclaimed and many of the foretold conditions had been met. Then came the thought that the great preacher himself was the Messiah, and many expected him so to announce. It was under such circumstances that John spoke to the people on

MANNER.—What is here given is proba-bly the epitome of an extended discourse, but it shows the method of presenting the theme. John made the people know that Messlah was coming, and that was the same as to disclaim the title for himself. He also announced that Messiah would be mightler than he, baptizing with the Holy Ghost and with fire (Acts ii, 3, 4), while he baptized only with water. That declaration indicated the true office of the two, the one having divine energy to bestow (Joel ii, 28), the other able only to use the symbol of that energy. Still further to exalt the coming one in the minds of his hearers, John humbled himself, declaring that he was not worthy to unloose His shoe latchet, a menial service performed by slaves. Having thus distinguished the Christ, John proceeded to declare his work. As the agriculturist win nows the grain, so the Christ would judge men and distinguish between the righteous and the wicked. (Matt. xxv, 32.) These utterances preceded the interview with the commissioners from Jerusalem (John i. 19-28), and presented the spiritual side of Messiah's kingdom. Isa. xliv, 3.) REPROOF.—John's preaching was not co fined to the proclamation of Christ and His kingdom; it had a practical side, which is always an element in true gospel ministra Because Christ was con ought to prepare. (Matt. iii, 2.) The eighteenth verse of the lesson shows that he exhorted his hearers, which exhortations were based on the facts stated in the seventeenth verse. Nor did he pause with pleadings of a general character; he boldly ad-ministered reproof to individuals. Even Herod, the Roman ruler (called tetrarch be cause he had authority over one of the four divisions of the land), drawn into the assembly, was not spared. John openly de-nounced the sins of which he had been guilty and told him plainly that it was not lawfu for him to live with Herodias, who was the wife of Herod's brother. (Matt. xiv, 4.) This incestuous marriage had scandalized the na-RESULT.-The ministry of John, like that of every bold and faithful preacher, was attended by two consequences, wholly unlike. Many of those who heard him repented and received baptism, confessing their sins (Matt. iii, 6.) That was part of his rich reward which he received for his devotion to the cause of righteousness (Matt. xvi, 27), a reward far exceeding any material good which men might covet. (I Thes. ii, 19.) But his message did not always produce this desirable result. It sometimes provoked the hearer and awakened his ill will. (I Peter il. 8.) So was it in the case of Herod. When his evil life was exposed he was offended And, exercising the power vested in him as Governor, he arrested the young reformer and shut him up in the prison of Machaerus. in the southern part of the province. This terminated John's public career, and the fact is here given out of its order to show the outcome of his faithfulness. The Baptist's name was added to the long roll of those illustrious men who counted not their lives dear unto them in the discharge of duty. (Rev. x!i, 11.) BAPTISM .- In treating the third feature of John's ministry no discussion of the made of baptism would be proper in these essons which are designed for all classes Besides, that subject is fully handled in many able works. John baptized penitents. He demanded this as a prerequisite in those who came to him. (Matt. iii. 8.) But why did he baptize Jesus? Was He penitent? Did He confess sins and make public profession of a new life? Certainly, no one, whatever his views of Him, would assert this. John seems to have hesitated when Jesus came, as if there was some impropriety in admitting Him to the ordinance. But Jesus removed his objections, saying that they must fulfill all righteousness. (Matt. iii, 14, 15.) But what righteousness? Two answers have been given-that Jesus made himself in this act an example; that He sought baptism as a priest, after the custom of the law. (Ex. xxix, 4.) A better explanation is this-that John's baptism was the initiatory rite to the new kingdom, the setting apart of a people called out of the old kingdom, and that Jesus, the sin-less head of that kingdom, preferred to enter as others had done, by a ceremony which He intended to perpetuate. (Matt. xxviii, 19.)

TESTIMONY.-Jesus had a reason for desiring baptism. It had been appointed as the method of making Him known to Israel. (John i, 31.) John had been in-formed that as he preceded with the ad-ministrations the Christ would be designated by a remarkable sign. (John i, 33.) He went forward, therefore, day after day, expecting that the wonderful Person would appear and that he might announce Him. And thus it actually came to pass. Descending out of heaven the Holy Ghost in the form of a dove, emblem of innocence and peace, rested upon Jesus. This was a visible proof of the Baptist, enabling him positively to testify as he did (John i, 32) concerning Jesus to his disciples. (John i, 34-36.) But this was not the only evidence granted. There came a voice saying, "Thou art my beloved son; in Thee I am well pleased." (Verse 22.) From this it is inferred that Jesus came in that hour into full consciousness of his divine nature, the early impulses of which were felt in the temple. (Luke ii, 49.)

CONCLUSION.—Every man's work must be estimated by the place he occupies.
He who does what he was sent (John i, 6) to do deserves all honor. Measured by that standing John the Baptist was an eminent success. He proclaimed the new dispensation and made ready a few people to become the followers of Christ (John 1, 37) whom he was permitted to introduce. whom he was permitted to introduce. It was a service of great responsibility, never given to mortal before or since. The simplicity of his method, preaching and baptism, illustrated the liberty of the gospel plan (Gal. v. 1), contrasting with the heavy ceremonial of the old economy. Having fulfilled his mission he could afford to lie in a prison cell and exhibit his heroic patience until to appears an angry woman tience until, to appease an angry woman (Matt. xiv. 8), he was released to enter upon his eternal reward. (Rev. vii, 14.) Greater than any who preceded him was John (Matt. xi. 11), but greater than he may they be who help to extend the king-dom which He proclaimed. (Dan. xii, 3.)
